From Shrub to Light: The Oronyo Journey

Nestled in the majestic embrace of the Himalayan forests grows a modest shrub, the source of our exquisite lokta paper. This durable yet delicate material is the heart of our new lighting range, Oronyo.

Oronyo, a name inspired from the Bengali term 'Aranya' that translates to 'forest' and encapsulates the essence of our design inspiration.

Artisanal Echoes of the Forest

Each Oronyo fixture is a testament to the art of handcraftsmanship. The lokta paper is meticulously pleated by skilled artisans, creating a linear crumpled texture reminiscent of the serene and untamed tapestry of the forest floor.

Oronyo is a narrative that begins in the heart of the forest, travels through the hands of our artisans, and culminates in a creation that brings the spirit of the woods into your space!

The pleated paper diffuses light gently, casting an enigmatic interplay of shadow and brightness that mirrors the dappled sunlight piercing through a dense canopy of leaves. The pleating is not merely aesthetic, it is the soul of Oronyo, breathing life into the paper as it envelops the sturdy metal frame.

Sustainability in Every Beam: The Oronyo Promise

When illuminated, this product transcends its function as a lighting element to a rather immersive experience. The glow emanating from Oronyo is a homage to the forest's natural luminescence and a mesmerizing reminder of the raw beauty that thrives in the wild, from where the raw material originates.

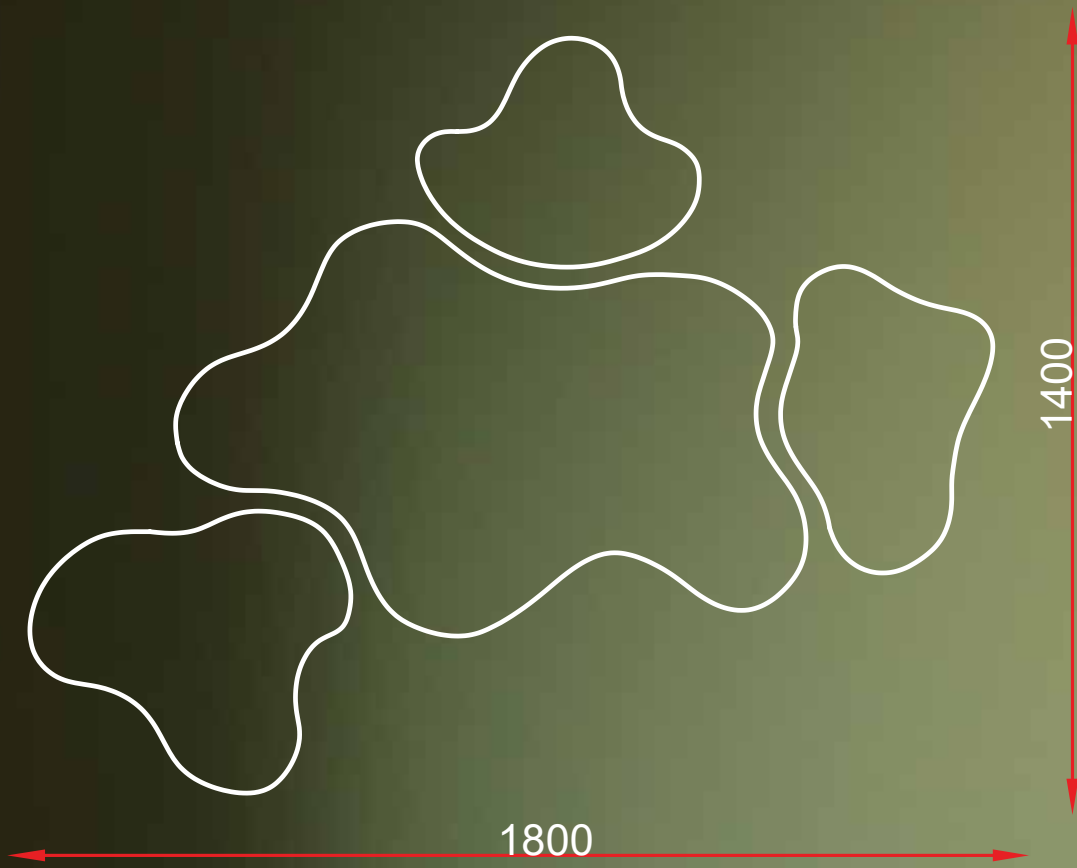

Choosing Oronyo is more than a decision to illuminate your space; it is an ode to the beauty of our planet, an embrace of sustainable practices, and a support for the artisanal heritage that turns natural gifts into man-made wonders.

With Oronyo, you are not just installing a light fixture; you are illuminating your space with the lore of the forest, letting the timeless story of nature's beauty and human craftsmanship shine through!
